I leave my sunny childhood here,Oh! therefore let me weep!

I leave thee, sister,—we have play'd
Through many, a joyous hour,
Where the silvery green of the olive shade
Hung dim o'er the fount and bower;
Yes! thou and I, by stream, by shore, In song, in prayer, in sleep, Have been as we may be no more,— Kind sister let me weep!

I leave thee, father—Eve's bright moon
Must now light other feet,
With the gathered grapes and the lyre in tune
The homeward steps to greet!
Thou, in whose voice, to liess thy child,
Lay tones of love so deep,
Whose eye o'er all my youth hath smil'd—
I leave thee, let me ween!

Mother, I leave thee!-on thy braest Mother, I leave thee!—on thy bracest
Pouring out joy and wo,
I have found that holy place of rest
Still changeless—yet I go!
Lips that have lull'd me with your strain,
Eyes that have watched my sleep!
Will earth give love like yours again?—
Sweet mother! let me weep,

I leave thee, let me weep!

HEART ECHOES.

Old songs! they ring upon the brain,
Like whispers from the far-off spheres,
And with the thrilling spell revive
The genial love of byg me years.
What though beneath the sod they lie, That pale array of honored dead; In hues immortal round the heart, Still, still a hallowed beam they shed,

Old songs! I never guess how large A space was in this heart of mine,
Till one dull eve, by chance I found
A well worn book, whose every line
Came back to me as clear as though But yesterday I'd laid it down, But there I found the wished for clue That snoke for days forever flown.

Oh, when smid the world of doubt, Of light and shade in which we stray, We seek some charm by which to drive

Some temporary grief away.

Let those which love such pleasures, court
The favorites that entrance the throng, For me, I'll find a holier scene, And lull me with some dear old song.

I've Got Orders Not to Go.

If any young man will take heed will be saved from many fatal errors and from wretchedness and remorse. We wish all our readers bad the resolute will of John, in the following incident:

"I've got orders-positive orders not to go there-orders that I dare not disobey," said a youth who was will be sold at prices far lower than such articles being tempted to a smoking and gambling saloon.

Come, don't be so womanishcome along like a man, shouted the youths.

A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call oneanother liars, but when any one said a thing that was not true, they ought to whistie. One Sunday he preached a sermon on the parable of the loaves and fishes, and being at a loss how to explain, it he said the loaves were not like these now-adays; they were as big as the hills of Scotland. He had scarely pronoun-notice, by experienced workmen.
